A Day in The Countryside

Think of the classic English countryside – sweeping meadows, ancient leafy trees, flowers of every colour – and you’re thinking of Shakespeare’s England. The scenic natural landscapes that inspired the Bard still thrive in Warwickshire, and even a journey by train between the region’s bustling historic towns offers wonderful views of lush greenery.

There’s a wealth of things to do here away from the hustle and bustle:

- Take your family on a trip to Mary Arden’s Farm, the farm where Shakespeare’s mother grew up and which is still a working farm today.
- Rent an iconic Pashley bicycle from their store in Stratford-upon-Avon and take a leisurely cycle through country lanes to the picturesque, historical market towns of Alcester or Henley-in-Arden, just a few miles away.
- Enjoy a secluded walk with your loved one through Kenilworth Castle’s Elizabethan gardens, followed by a romantic meal at the nearby Michelin-starred inn, The Cross.

With such a varied choice of ways to enjoy the great outdoors in Shakespeare’s England, there really is no better place to escape the stress of the rat race.
